NOTES: Bill Wyman and Charlie Watts did not become regular members of The Rolling Stones until early February, 1963; up to this point various bassists and drummers filled the spots. Dick Taylor (later with The Pretty Things) played bass up to late September or early October, 1962. Ricky Fenson (born Ricky Brown) became the next bass player, occasionally substituted by Colin Golding (of The Presidents). When neither of them were able to play, the Stones performed without a bass. As to drums, Tony Chapman was the group's usual drummer in 1962/early 1963, replaced in a few gigs by Carlo Little, Steve Harris or Colin Folwell; Mick Avory (later with The Kinks) only seems to have played for rehearsals. Ian Stewart on piano was part of the official line-up until May, 1963. – At the beginning, the group was called in various ways: THE ROLLIN' STONES, MICK JAGGER AND THE ROLLING STONES or THE ROLLING STONES. The name was originally suggested by Brian Jones after a line in Muddy Waters' blues classic Rollin' Stone a.k.a. Rollin' Stone Blues.

taneously in 1955 for Vee-Jay Records and credited to (producer) Calvin Carter; some sources, however, list Arnold as composer; – Considering the fact that The Rolling Stones did not perform 18 songs in any of their 1960s shows, this list (derived from Ian Stewart's 1962 diary as shown in Roy Carr's book The Rolling Stones. An illustrated Record), probably reflects the band's early repertoire rather than the actual set of their first show (unless the band played two different sets on this date which is theoretically possible since The Rolling Stones were billed as supporting act to Long John Baldry's Kansas City Blues Band).

Oldham and/or by Abkco to And Mr. Spector And Mr. Pitney Came Too (recorded at Regent Sounds Studio, London, February 3-4, 1964; see Entry 0.021:cut 5 above) when the track was registered in the BMI files.
